Friday 15 March

09:30-11:30am: Hillsborough, Christchurch

Whakawhanaungatanga & kai included

REGISTER to join this experiential workshop that will:

- Examine a model of leadership, representative of who we are
- Delve into our own aspirations
- See ourselves as Rainbow-identifying leaders and allies
- Identify gaps in our knowledge and explore how we could close these gaps
- Identify opportunities to increase Rainbow-inclusive leadership
- Provide opportunities to network with Rainbow Leaders and allies from other organisations as part of celebrating Pride.

Register via online form ASAP as numbers are limited.

Meet the Facilitator:

Martine Hartley-Parsons
(she/her/ia)

Martine is an openly queer cis-gendered woman. Her heritage is English and Canadian. From the outset of her career, she made a conscious decision to be 'out' and worked towards building social work practice that was inclusive and response to the needs of LGBTIQ+ young people. She is a former senior leader in the New Zealand Public Service, leading the development and implementation of the Diversity and Inclusion work programme for the public service, including the first survey of rainbow-identifying public servants in New Zealand. Martine uses visibility to create safety for others and believes that even small actions can make a big difference. One starfish at a time.
